DEAR INVESTOR RELATIONS PROFESSIONAL,

In today's fast moving markets investors are seeking company information that is timely, useful and visual.

As investors are looking to build a comprehensive understanding of the latest news, regulatory filings, as well as historical stock prices and earnings, reliability and promptness are of primary importance. Thus, providing up-to-the-minute information through well-developed and reliable investor relations programs is a key objective for any mature company. Furthermore, the presentation of information is just as important as the accuracy and timeliness of the data.

123jump.com has recently developed investor relations solutions aiming to facilitate the communication between companies and their shareholders. Whether they are large or small, all investors are looking for a clear and easy way to comprehend information on earnings data, historical and current stock price performance, and to navigate through wide-ranging news archives.

Our company employs a blend of technologies and tailored customer services to integrate a variety of investment modules into investor relations pages, corporate intranets, and websites of financial institutions seeking to provide seamless connectivity to vital financial information.

Each of our financial modules can be fully customized to match the image and culture of your website at both visual and conceptual levels. Our interactive charts reveal abundant statistics that relate to whatever your mouse is hovering over.

123jump.com is a provider of standard and customized solutions to meet your requirements. Regardless of the market cap of the company that you represent, a better informed investor will always be better for your company.

We look forward to hearing from you and about your company's interests.

ABOUT US

Every serious investor knows that the short-term movements in financial markets are driven by news, emotion, and momentum, while the underlying long-term value of any particular financial instrument is determined by the quality of the earnings it can generate over time.

Evaluating the relative merits of investment opportunities requires accurate, reliable, and timely information about markets, sectors, and companies. With very few exceptions, free, high-quality information necessary to make informed investment decisions is not readily available to the on-line investor.

123jump.com and Ticker.com are two on-line information sites that specialize in gathering, validating, and archiving financial information, as well as providing investment tools for the serious investor looking for high-quality information. Since 123jump.com's initial launch in 1999, the site has continued to expand the range of content offered and has recently added global markets coverage. The editorial staff has grown to ninety-five people spread over four continents: North and South America, Europe, and Asia.

Every day 123Jump.com and Ticker.com report on conditions in twenty financial markets; analyze the latest earnings reports; collect and organizes economic data; track IPO information in the US; and conduct interviews with consistently performing portfolio managers and senior executives at various organizations.

Currently, we provide financial information, stock prices and charting solutions for the companies listed on the exchanges in the U.S., Canada, the UK, India and the UAE.
